I just happened to stumble on to them. I will be shopping here for now on and would highly recommended them to anyone. Weve been able to find some items we cant get from our regular supplier. Always great prices. We cant find the supplies we need to go with our spray gun. They had them. Their guns were so inexpensive that we actually ended up buying a new spraygun. All Rights Reserved. Joseph Gallagher 1.0 out of 5 stars For every other normal human who values their intestines staying in one piece don't buy this. I had to work three long 12 hour shifts in a row in the hospital and being the responsible girl I am, I planned ahead to make warm delicious chili to bring with me for lunch. I slaved away making the best chili I could and left for a few hours yes I've seen This is Us and when I came back to the delicious smells of my chili I couldn't be happier. My heart grew three sizes in that moment only to be SHATTERED like the top of the crock pot was when I pulled the handle to taste my chili. RUINED. my chili, my week, my hope in humanity. After owning it a very short time, I must say, I'm surprised so many people liked it. Here's what I didn't like There are no handles on the crock pot itself to aid in lifting it out of casing. All the while wearing oven mitts, or other hand protection, as the pot gets very hot. I really wish I'd have noticed this prior to purchasing. There is no indicator light.

This is very annoying, as you cannot tell, at glance, if the pot is on or off. I cannot understand why any appliance, manufactured today would lack this most basic element. A minor complaint, but still worth noting, is that when you wash the lid, those clamps that are attached to it hold water, so its very hard to dry, the water keeps dripping from them, even after several wipes with a dish towel. In all honesty, I regret this purchase and am already considering buying a different pot, due to the above concerns. I was a little confused about all the broken lids. I was wondering if the cause might be locking the lid while cooking. I looked at the manual and it stated to not lock the lid during cooking and then later stated to lock the lid for the first two hours of cooking. So I am still a little confused. I bought this as a replacement. It cooks WAY too hot. Food was burned into the inside when cooking for the same time as my old pot. Also, this crockpot is a huge safety hazard. My old one was hot on the outside, yes. But you could touch it without getting burned. I placed my food thermometer against the outside, and got a reading of 201 DEGREES. ON THE OUTSIDE! will definitely be returning. I made chicken stroganoff in the old crockpot, and buffalo chicken in this one. Set them both on low at the same time and the chicken in both cooked at the same pace. Per directions, I did not lock the lid while cooking. So I didn't experience shattering lids, leaking, nor caving in of the outer casing. I love the red color of this one and the oval shape, my old one is boring brown and circular. And I like having the warm setting on this one. I crockpot cook most of the year will update if anything changes. I've even transported it with the lid locked and it hasn't shattered, but I only lock the lid when transporting and unlock when I plug it back in.

I want to like it because it has some great features the clip on lid, the little vent hole, the oval shape, the removable crock but it has a major problem with temperature. After 7 hours on high the contents of the crock measured 140 degrees and the outside was so hot you could not touch it. According to crockpot.com it should take a slow cooker 34 hours to get up to 209 degrees on the high setting. I had to pull the corned beef brisket out and finish it in the oven and all of the rest of the goodies in the braising liquid had to be finished on the stove. This just shouldn't happen. The other three I have used had the same problem where the outside got really, really hot. My sisters, on low, completely scorched chili an inch deep all the way around and across the bottom in five hours. It's almost like they have the high and low settings mislabeled on the machine. So, two that the previous roommates had seemed okay other than the extremely hot exterior and two others that seemed defective. Seems like a 50% chance you'll get a dud. Kind of chintzy compared to my old one, but it works well. And it still works. Hey, what can I say, I'm attached to the thing. I already knew this one wouldn't be made as well. And unlike my very old one, it gets VERY hot, so you might want to take care to protect countertops. However, it performs well for however long it lasts, given the way things are produced today. Like just about everybody else, I long for the days when things were made well and lasted practically forever instead of being Programmed To Fail. My old crockpot collector's version is living proof of those days. It was Made in America, of course. Just saying! I use this pot to make batches of long-simmering bone broth. I haven't used it for anything else, but I can say it's perfect for that task. How on earth am I supposed to use it over here. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again.
